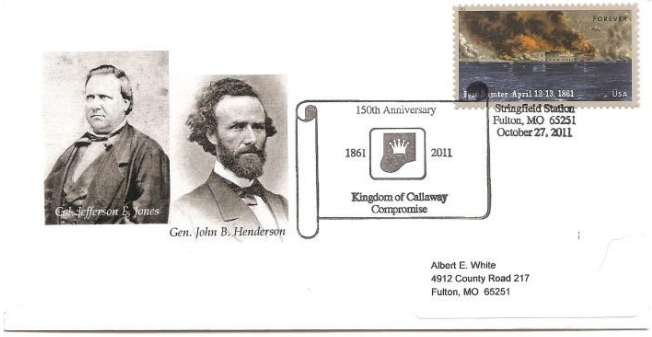
The Civil War in Missouri on Cover

Albert White

Missouri was considered a border state with many citizens sympathetic to both the Union and the Confederacy. As shown in the Patriotic Cover below, Missouri was “On the Fence”

Although Missouri didn’t succeed from the Union, Callaway County essentially did and became known as the Kingdom of Callaway



Above is an event covers commemorating the battle of ‘Moore’s Mill’ and an event cover commemorating the Kingdom of Callaway Compromise. The pictorial postmarks identify the ‘Kingdom of Callaway’.

Fulton is the largest town in Callaway County and is also the county seat. The two Patriotic Covers above have Fulton postmarks. .
