In response to these revelations, the U.S., instead of charging the soldiers with murder, charged Assange with “hacking” the Pentagon computer where the records of these atrocities had been hidden from public view.

In characteristic fashion, the CIA’s solution to losing face was to develop plans to poison or kidnap Assange. Some of the proposals involved breaking into the Ecuadorean embassy in London and dragging him out, and shooting out the tires of a plane if Assange was onboard.

All of these actions by public officials make a mockery of the rule of law and the right of the American people to know what their government does in their name.
